ASK ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: How does a woman recover when The Love of Her Life says, "Good-bye?"

I was married to a man who was more like a father to me than a husband. He was 20 years my senior and died after we were married only four years. Then I met an attractive, intellectually stimulating, physically exciting man. I fell in love for the very first time. We had a mad, ecstatic affair and I gave myself to him body and soul. We talked of marriage and I was sure we were matched in heaven. My dreams collapsed when he told me I'd better forget about him because we were not "right" for each other.

It has been several months now and I can't get him out of my mind. I compare my love with every man I meet and there is no comparison. Please tell me how can a woman recover from a broken heart?—EMPTY

Dear Empty: Tell yourself it is self-defeating to cling to bits and pieces of something that no longer exists.

The woman who grieves over The Man Who Got Away has a talent for screening out all the unpleasant aspects of the relationship. She remembers only the heavenly moments. As time passes and memory dims, the dead romance becomes more beautiful in death than it ever was in life.

The mind can accommodate only one thought at a time. Substitute another thought — something real and constructive for the fantasy.

Dear Ann Landers: I worked as a hotel maid for ten years and now I work in a motel. It's the same difference. The people who drive up in the most expensive cars and have the fanciest luggage are the biggest pigs. I hope you will print something about the way folks behave when they get outside their own homes. It's disgraceful.

Can you imagine grown people wiping their shoes on bedspreads and using face towels to polish their cars? Well, they do. They also spill ink on the walls, leave beer cans and whiskey bottles under the beds, and walk out with 10c water glasses. They check out leaving the TV on and the dirty water in the bath tub. The worst pigs of all leave no tip for the maid who has to clean up the mess and make the room look perfect for the next guests.

If you print this, thousands of hard-working women will thank you.—FED UP WITH PEOPLE

Dear Fed: Here it is, and you're welcome. I strongly recommend that neat folks who travel leave 50c a night for the maid. Pigs who travel should leave $1.

Dear Ann Landers: My married daughter lives in another city but I visit her quite often. She has teenage children and a nice husband. Since her marriage she has developed a habit which I'm sure is keeping her back socially. She laughs too loud and too long.

It's plain to me that the girl has many acquaintances but no friends. I can see people cringe and actually withdraw from her before she gets a chance to show her fine qualities. She is exhausting, both to herself and to others.

I cannot discuss this with her because she would resent it. Is there any way I can help?—D. TROIT

Dear D: The girl's loud laughter is not the problem. It is only the symptom of a deeper problem which she is trying to cover up. If her husband is an understanding man suggest that he urge her to get professional help. If not, then suggest it yourself and risk the resentment.

No teen-ager is as confident as he appears. Get clued in. Send for Ann Landers' booklet "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request 35c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ANCESTRY OF GENE COMBS, PRESIDENT COMBS FAMILY ASSOCIATION

By Ruth M. Combs, Historian

Nicholas Combs of Perry Davidson, widow of Joe David-son, said by Dr. Josiah Combs (deceased), of Ft. Worth, Texas, to have a son of Mason Combs, and his wife, Sarah? of Stafford County, Va., is thought to have died about 1837-8 at 101 or 102 years of age. Two or more grandchildren of Nicholas Combs of Perry County said their grandfather was a Revolutionary Veteran.

In re-applying for a Revolutionary pension in 1855 from Perry County, Ky., Nicholas Combs stated he "was smartly past 90" and due to "an inconsistency" his first petition had been denied. No papers have been obtainable from National Archives on this first application. These, no doubt would have given more details as to family, etc. Only a son Nicholas, Jr., is mentioned in the second application.

Although Dr. Josiah Combs, some years ago did not believe this to be true it seems quite possible that this is our "Dinger Nick" and the 1737-1837-8 dates could be wrong since other known facts fit in with the latter dates. Nicholas Combs, called "Dinger Nick" because of his "irascible temper" was said by a grandson to have been "a wild man, ready to fight in a minute, but very kind hearted". He is said once to have scolded a relative severely for not properly burying a slave.

A grandson and a grand-daughter in separate interviews with Rev. J. J. Dickey in 1898 stated that their grandfather had five children. The grandson, John S. Combs, said his grandmother was Nancy Grigsby and named the five children of his grandparents, Nicholas and Nancy Grigsby Combs as: Alicia or (Alicia Nancy) who married the Rev. Richard Smith, a Baptist preacher; Rebecca who married John Williams (Clay Co. Ky. record 7-17-1809); Jeremiah born 1870, was called "Chunky Jerry". He was short like the Grigsbys; said his son John S. Combs who also said his mother was Sytha Sumner, so she would be the first wife of "Chunky Jerry". He probably had a second wife and Sally Grigsby was number three. The 1850 census of Perry County shows Jeremiah as 68 years old. Sally 25, Jeremiah 11, Betty 7, maybe children of another wife or grandchildren; R. (?) 4 female, and Harrison 2, male. Other children of "Chunky Jerry" are: Nicholas b. about 1800, Moses 1806; John S. b. 1819; Andrew and others, says Rev. Gilbert Combs in a paper on file at Kentucky Historical Society His father had $10,000 worth of land when he died said John S. Combs.

Nicholas Combs Jr., born 1778, called "Birdseye", married his cousin, Elizabeth Combs, daughter of John Combs of Lincoln recorded in Floyd County, Ky. date 4-20-1816, with consent of John Combs, father of Elizabeth. Their daughter, Margaret, married Abijah Lewis and were the parents of Judge Lou Lewis of Hyden. Nicholas and Elizabeth had a number of children and a son, Granville, was the great grandfather of Gene Combs, our Association President. Crusee Combs was a son of Granville Combs and his second wife Alecy Combs.

These marriages are from family records, the birth dates from 1850 census. William Combs (number 3 above) born 1-27-1823 and died 2-20-1892, and his second wife Mary Burke, widow of Daniel Burke, had three children, (each had other children). The three were James Jesse Combs, Samuel Preston Combs and Nancy Combs Hammonds. James Jesse Combs married Nannie Brandenburgh 9-3-1888, in Owsley County where his parents now lived. Their seven children who lived to maturity were: Matt B. Combs b. 9-18-1889; who married Carrie Brandenburgh; Elsie Combs, born 2-12-1891 who married John Edwin Seale; Addie Combs b. 9-27-1893 married Fred Brandenburgh; and her twin sister Allie Combs who married D. S. Thom as; Earle Bryan Combs b. 5-14-1899 who married Ruth McCollum; Conley Combs b. 11-30-1901, married Ethel Jackson and Clayton N. Combs b. 10-13-1906 who never married.

(Other children of Crusee Combs and wife Nancy Maggard Combs were Nicholas, never married; Susan who married David Cooley; Sarah who married Ed Polly; Mary who married Elhannon Combs, son of "Black Sam" and Dianah Combs who married Austin Godsey.)

Mrs. Baker Hosts Stork Shower Friday For Mrs. Mahala Gibson

By W. R. Williston

Attendance at the Christian Church and Sunday School was 44; the offering was $11.10. We all went up to the Williston Cemetery Sunday evening and had church. We had really good services with Rev. Asbel Stidham, from Indiana, doing the preaching.

Our dinner guests Sunday were Brother Bill and Sophia Begley. Our visitors Saturday were Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Bailey, from Campbellsville. We were surely glad to have them all. We do enjoy having good people visited us.

We were certainly sorry to hear of the death of Dr. Payne. He was a good doctor and ready to go to the sick at all times. We don't find many like him any more.

Mrs. Charlene Baker was hostess at a stork shower at her home Friday for her sister, Mahala Gibson. My wife was there so I dropped by and had dinner with them. It was really a good dinner with almost anything you could want to eat. They reported a good time at the shower and that Mrs. Gibson received a lot of nice things. They also had a Stanley Party there too.

We have just heard that Brother McKinley Campbell, of Marion, Indiana, died yesterday. He was a real good man and a minister, too. I was sure sorry to hear of his death, but he has been in ill health for a long time.

We also heard that Martha Jane Williston is back in the hospital again.

Mrs. Sude Stidham has been on a vacation for three weeks in Ohio and Indiana, but returned home Friday night for some time. Her children all live out there, so she had something to go for.

Hindman Settlement School's Program

The periodic written reports turned in by the workers described examples of small failures as well as successes. Sometimes the children would not show up to play. Others obviously came out only for the free lunch provided by the program, prepared by the workers, and in one or two places, parents were not completely cooperative.

But over-all, the summer project went over smoothly, thanks in large measure to the ingenuity and enthusiasm of the workers. They had little equipment to work with. They had to improvise much of their camping and recreation and craft equipment, and rely upon their own resources to solve their own local problems.

Their resourcefulness is perhaps the main reason the program appeared to run smoothly from headquarters. Some youngsters had to tough out rainy nights, outdoors, without tents, but there were no accidents all summer. Some parents may have been a little suspicious of strangers in their communities, but the majority of them responded appreciatively to what the workers were trying to do.

Perhaps no young lives were totally changed as a result of the project, but at least some windows of new experience were opened for children who have always been isolated from the main currents of the world. The summer's effort at least laid the ground-work for more elaborate and ambitious projects to come.

Jim Pete Combs

James P. Combs, winner of the 1953 Perry County "Father of the Year" award given by the Hazard Kiwanis Club, is another of the many outstanding Combs of Perry County.

A father of six children, he spent most of his life logging while his wife, Ann, done most of the house work.

As Mr. Combs put it when notified as the winner of the "Father of the Year" award, "I was away from home logging a great deal of the time while the children were young," he said, "and my wife had to be both a father and mother to them."

The Combs' first two children died but the last six have grown into fine, upstanding citizens. The eldest is Cornia Johnson, a Hazard housewife. The others are Paul, Lawrence, Fred, Mrs. Louanna Lykins, and Cooley.

In an interview with Fred B. Bullard of the Hazard Herald after the presentation, Mr. Combs had this to say about his children:

"We had to work hard to do this, and explained how he logged and farmed to keep the family going. Mrs. Combs did a great deal of the farming, and, she said, "when the kids got big enough I had them farming, too."

Jim Pete, as all his friends call him, chuckled when he said "I used to make it and they (the children) spent it. Now they make it and we spend it."

They've been mighty good to us, Mrs. Combs chimed in. Mr. Combs was born at Jeff on February 25, 1870 to Clinton and Louanna Baker Combs, who came to Kentucky from Virginia.

Mrs. Combs, who was Anna Godsey before her marriage to Jim Pete on November 27, 1890, was born on Carrs Fork near Defiance.

Baptist Church At Jeff Named For Preacher, Uncle Ira Combs

One of the most famous preachers ever to speak in Perry County and Eastern Kentucky is remembered as Uncle Ira Combs, who taught the Bible for more than 60 years until his death in 1934.

A veteran of the Civil War, one of the biggest land-owners he joined the Big Leatherwood church in 1872 and began preaching in 1874, walking and riding horseback to visit church groups scattered in the hills of Kentucky and Virginia.

The Old Regular Baptist Church at Jeff is dedicated to him and bears his name and a historical marker was placed at the homeplace in Jeff last year during the annual Combs Family Association Reunion last year.

Uncle Ira contributed his share to the population of the Combs clan by fathering 19 children by two wives.

In his first family, Uncle Ira was the father of William Orbin, Elijah, Talton, Rebecca Ann, Mary Eliza, Jane, Doshia, Susan, Mint, and one deceased unknown.

By his second wife, Uncle Ira fathered George of Manchester, William of Detroit, Sam of Jeff, Eli of Hazard, Norman of Jeff, Dallie Logan of Jeff, Allie Logan of Louisville, and Lettie and Dora, both dead.

Like most Kentucky's Combs, Uncle Ira's ancestral history is traceable, in his case to the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia.

In a letter written by Dr. Josiah H. Combs in 1953 to Uncle Ira's youngest son, Norman, Dr. Combs provided the following historical links:

Uncle Ira's grandfather, Ma son migrated to Kentucky from Virginia in the 18th century.

"Mason was born around 1760 in what is now Warren County, Virginia, in the Shenandoah, a few miles from the present town of Front Royal.

He married Jennie Richardson, presumably after his daddy, John, moved to Curry County, North Carolina.

"In the 1780's he moved to Perry, in the 1790's exact year not known. He settled on river, opposite mouth of Carr, on the land later owned by 'Preacher' Ira, his grandson.

He died in a typhoid epidemic in 1822 or 1823. He was buried on old graveyard on hill.

Norman Combs

Norman Combs, postmaster at Jeff for about 20 years and the father of six living children, is the youngest child of the famed preacher Uncle Ira Combs of Jeff. Norman serves as sixth vice-president of the Combs Family Association.

Born to the Combs at Jeff in 1913, Norman attended the Hazard Baptist Institute in Hazard before going to Cincinnati, Ohio, to work where he met his wife, the former Katherine Mae Hicks.

He and his wife returned to the homeplace at Jeff where he worked until he became postmaster. After serving a term during World War II in the U. S. Army he returned to Jeff to continue his capacity as postmaster, which he is presently occupied at.

They have six children, Delbert, Delores, Norma Grace, Oscar, Harold, and Ira.

They presently live at the homeplace with the two youngest children, Harold, age 17 and Ira, age 12.

The Name and Family of Combs--Coombs

Colonel Eliza Combs Knuckles Only Remaining Child of Clinton Combs

(Compiled by The Media Research Bureau, Washington, D.C. Copied from the Salt Lake City, Utah Library by Opal Combs (Mrs. Clinton).)

The name of Combs or Coombs is in many cases of ancient Anglo-Saxon origin and derived from the residence of its first bearers "at the comb"; that is, a cell or hollow in a hillside; a valley. Many places in various parts of England are so designated. In some cases, of similar derivation in France, being taken from the Latin combs, which means "valley between two mountains." The name appears in ancient European and early American records in the various spellings of Combs, Combe, Combs, Coombs, Combes, Cumbe, Combes, Combs, Coombs, Combs and Combs. Of these, the last two are the forms most frequently in evidence in America in modern titles.

Families bearing this name were living at early dates in English Counties of Somerset, Oxford, Dorset, Derby, Gloucester, York, Norfolk, Suffolk, Warwick, Worcester, Devon, Wilts, Hants, Buckingham, Surrey, Sussex, Hertford, Middlesex and London. They were in considerable part of the British landed and educated classes. In many of the counties mentioned, particularly Sussex, Devon, Somerset, Suffolk, Wilts, Dorset, Hants and Derby, there are localities bearing the name of Combs, Combs, Coombs and Combs.

Among the earliest records of the name in the British Isles are those of Edmund de la Combs, of Norfolk County, in the latter half of the thirteenth century; Gilbert and John Ace Combe, of Oxfordshire, in 1273; Roger de la Cumbe, of Oxfordshire, in the same year; Henry de la Cumbe, of Somersetshire, about the same time; John de la Combe of Gloucestershire in 1229; John in le Combe, of Somersetshire in 1327; Rodolphus de Combe and Robertus Combe of Yorkshire in 1379; and Richard Combe of Newington, County Middlesex, in the latter half of the fifteenth century.

The last mentioned Richard Combe of County Middlesex, had a son John who left issue at Newington of a son named Robert, who married Agnes, daughter of John Waterhouse and was the father by her of two children, Richard and Alice. Of these, Richard settled at Hemel Hempstead in Hertfordshire and died there in 1595. This Richard Combe of Combes, of Hertfordshire, was the father by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of William Marshall, of Buckinghamshire, of a son named Francis, who married Jane, daughter of John Pope, of Oxfordshire, before 1583 and had issue by her of Francis, Richard, (died young), Tobit or Toby (Tobias), Charles, William, another Richard, John and five daughters. Of the sons, Francis married twice but left no progeny; while Tobias, heir to the Hertfordshire estates, was the father by his wife Mary, daughter of John Theede, of a son Sir Richard Combes. Sir Richard married Anne, daughter and heir of John Freere of Stoke, County Suffolk, about the middle of the seventeenth century, and had issue by her of Richard, Thomas and Anne Combes.

According to one noted historian, John Combe, of Ashley and Stratford-on-Avon, County Warwick, was descended from the elder branch of the family in Hertfordshire, but the exact connection is not in evidence. John had a son of the same name, who was the father of another John Combe, who married a Miss Blount of Worcester and had issue by her of four sons, Edward, Thomas, John and George. Of the Edward probably left only one female issue; while Thomas married Mary Savage, of Worcestershire, before 1588 and had issue by her of William, Thomas, Mary and Joyce Combe of Warwick.

Edward Combe, who was living at Tisbury, County Somerset, toward the end of the sixteenth century, married Alice, the daughter of Barnaby Lewis, and was the father by her of a son named William, who made his home at Norton Ferrers, in the same county. William married Isobel, daughter of Thomas Smith, of Wiltshire about 1600 and had issue by her of Edward, Thomas, John and Mary.

(died young), Edward, Thomas, Isobel, Margaret and Jane Combe. Of these, Edward was first married to Mary, daughter of John Folwell of Hampshire but had only female issue by this union. His second wife, Rebecca Topp of Wiltshire, gave him two sons, Edward and William, of whom the former was born in the year 1642.

The earliest family of the name in France is believed to have been that originally seated at Saint Saturnin, in Auvergne, prior to the year 1411. Of this line, Yves de Combe was living about 1470 and had issue by his wife, Marie Favresse, of a son named Jean (John), who was first married in 1489 to Alix, daughter of Jean Berset. He later married Jacqueline Barthelmy-Bernard and was the father by her of a son named Antoine (Anthony). Antoine de Combs was married in 1547 to Isabelle Thomas d'Apchier. Jean de Combes, an elder brother of the last mentioned Antoine became prominent in public affairs and was in the service of the Duke of Alencon, brother to the King of France. By his wife, Jeanne Malet, this Jean de Combes had a son called Jean Combes, who married Jeanne Chalmel in 1570 and in 1587 took a second wife the widow (nee Commelet) Champfleur. His sons included Heiresme, Achille and Gabriel, of whom the last was born to the second union. This Gabriel married Philberte Charrier in 1618 and had issue by her of a son named Charles.

Hieresme de Combes above mentioned, acquired the Lordship of Miremont in 1620 by his wife, Louise d'Ussel; he had a son named Gabriel, who married Suzanne de Murat in 1641. Achille, brother to Hieresme, was married in 1613 to Toinette de Milles, by whom he had a son named Gilbert, became Lord of Morelles, in France.

Another early French line was represented toward the end of the sixteenth century by Bertrand de Combes, of the French Pyrenees. Bertrand left issue by his wife, Marie de Lapene, and was the grandfather of Jean de Combes, LL.D., who was married in 1634 to Catherine de Jujols. To this union was born a son named Jean, who became magistrate and judge at Neuchezan. He married Gabrielle d'Agien in 1667 and left numerous issue.

Other French lines of the family included that of Jean Combes, Lord of Content, doctor and lawyer who was married in 1602 to Anne d'izarny, from which union was descended Jeanne Combes, Secretary to the King; that of Charles de Combes, of Montagut, Lord of Combes (or Combas) and Knight of the Order of the King, who was listed among the nobility in 1638; that of the Combes family of Normandy, in 1669, which is believed to have had its origin in the vicinity of Lyon; and that of Louis de Combes, who was born at Lyon and settled at an early date at Geneva, in Switzerland. The last was the father in the year 1609 of a son named Thomas whose descendants were numerous.

Probably the first of the name in America was John Combs or Coombs (also recorded as Combe, and Coomes), of Plymouth, Mass., who came from England about the year 1630. He had issue by his wife Sarah Cutbertson, of a son named Francis and possibly other children as well.

About 1647 Henry Coombs resided at Marblehead, Mass. There he was the father by his wife Elizabeth of Henry, Humphrey, Deborah, Elizabeth, Michael, Susannah and Richard, of whom the last left only one child, a daughter named Bridget.

Of the other sons of the immigrant Henry, Henry Jr., is said to have had a son named John, who resided at Salem, Mass.; Humphrey was married in 1659 to Bathsheba Rayment or Raymond, of Seabrook, Conn., by whom he had issue of a daughter named Hannah and probably of other children as well; and Michael was the father by his wife Joanna of two sons, Michael and Joshua Coombs. Of these Michael Jr. was married in 1694 to Ruth Rhoades, by whom he had issue of six children; Joanna, Richard, Joshua, Michael, Ruth and Elizabeth.

About 1660 Anthony or Alister Combs or Combs, who is asserted by family historians to have been of French ancestry, came to America about 1734 and settled at Newbury or Newburyport, Mass. He married Lydia Johnson before 1736 and was the father by her of William, Martha, Lydia, Betty, John, Mary, Isaac and Sarah. There may have been some connection between this and the beforementioned Alister Combs, who was of Scottish descent and it is possible that Anthony and Alister were separate immigrants, both of whom settled in Maine. Anthony was married at York, Maine in 1688 to Dorcas Wooden, by whom he was the father of Mary, Peter, Tabitha, Anthony, John, Hannah, Rosanna, Ithamer, Joshua, Frances and Jane.

Peter, eldest son of the immigrant Anthony married Joanna Hodgkins at Gloucester, Mass. He was the father of five children: George, Peter, Samuel, Caleb and Abigail. Of these George married Abigail Berry, by whom he had issue of Peter, George, Asa, Joseph, Thomas, Joanna, Abigail, Betsy and Isabella Coombs; but the records of the other brothers are not complete.

Joshua, youngest son of the immigrant Anthony, married Elizabeth Pratt in 1729. To this union were born (chiefly at Newburyport, Mass.) nine children—Elizabeth, Joshua, Stephen, Daniel, Mary, Sarah, Ebenezer, John and Jacob. Of these, Joshua had nine children: Rhoda, Joshua, Susanna, Rebecca, Abner, Margaret, Eben, Betsy, and Deliverance Coombs. Stephen married Jemima Dow about 1761 and was the father by her of Stephen, David, Sarah, Memima, Daniel, Mary, Nathaniel, Judith, Jonathan and Lucretia Coombs. Ebenezer married Abigail Thompson in 1773 and had issue by her of three children, Andrew, Cynthia and Ebenezer Coombs, of whom the last died young; and John left issue at Bowdoin, Maine by his first wife, Savia Brown of James, Joshua, Zebulon, Sarah, John, Savia and Joseph (died young). He is said to have had further issue by a second wife, Charlotte Tarr of Jane, Charlotte, Mary, Joseph, Jesiah C., Abigail and Thomas Coombs.

Sometime before 1662 John Coombs or Combs (also recorded as Combe, Coombe and Coombs) was living at Boston, Mass. In that year he married the widow Elizabeth Barlow by whom he had at least three children, Elizabeth, John and Mary. Possibly the son was that John Coombs or Combs, etc., who had twelve children (names unknown) at Northampton, Mass., and removed in 1714 to Springfield, Mass., where he had another.

Richard Combs or Coombs (1675-1752) whose place of birth is not certain, was living in Charles County, Virginia before the year 1700. He had a son named Andrew, who resided in Loudoun County, Virginia, and married a Miss Clements. He was the father by her of Joseph Coombs, Combs of Prince George's County, Maryland, who married Elizabeth Bayless and had issue by her of several sons, including Andrew, Samuel, Benjamin, and Bayless or Bayless Combs, and possibly John and Mahlon Combs, Coombs of Loudoun County, Virginia, who served in the Revolutionary War.

Others of the name who emigrated to America in the seventeenth century but left few records of themselves or their families were Richard Combes, of Elizabeth City County, Virginia in 1635; Charles Coomes or Combs of Northampton Co., Va., in 1655 and George Coombs of Charlestown, Mass., who died there in 1659. There was also a John Combs who came from Great Britain to Boston, Mass., before 1711 and was married in the following year to Dorothy Davis, but the names of his progeny are not known.

About 1730 Richard Coomes was living at Longmeadow, Mass., and by his wife Hepsibah he had a son named Samuel. This son married Miriam Hale in 1761 and was the father by her of Samuel, Silence (died young), Walter, another Silence, Noah, Achsa, Moses, Newell, Miriam and another son who died in infancy. Some of the descendants of this Coombs line made their homes in New York.

Philip Coombs, who was born on the Island of Guernsey, in the English Channel, came to America about 1734 and settled at Newbury or Newburyport, Mass. He married Lydia Johnson before 1736 and was the father by her of William, Martha, Lydia, Betty, John, Mary, Isaac and Sarah. There may have been some connection between this and the beforementioned Alister Combs, who was of Scottish descent and it is possible that Anthony and Alister were separate immigrants, both of whom settled in Maine. Anthony was married at York, Maine in 1688 to Dorcas Wooden, by whom he was the father of Mary, Peter, Tabitha, Anthony, John, Hannah, Rosanna, Ithamer, Joshua, Frances and Jane.

The bearers of the name in America may be described as generally vigorous, active, sociable and possessed in many cases of considerable intellectual ability. They have been prominent in humanitarian endeavors, chiefly as educators, clergymen and public officers.

Among those of the name who served in the Colonial forces during the American Revolutionary War were Anthony, Lt. Anthony Jr., Ebenezer, John, Joseph Stout, and Capt. Peter Combes of Maine and Mass. Anthony, Asa, Berney, Benjamin, Caleb, Elnathan, Fields, Hezekiah, Hosea, Jacob, John, John Jr., Joseph, Joshua, Lemuel, Nathan, Nicholas, Peleg, Lt. Peter, Samuel, Simeon, Solomon and William Combs or Coombs (also recorded in some cases as Cooms or Coomes) of Mass. and Maine; Lt. Benjamin, Daniel, Edward, Francis, George, Ensign Gilbert, Ignatius, Ensign John, Capt. Joseph, Mahlon, Robert and William Combs (some times Coombs or Coomes) of Virginia; Christopher Coom of Illinois; Barnard, Capt. George, John, Richard, Peter, Samuel, Samuel Jr., Solomon and Uriel Coombs (some times Combs) of New York and Charles, Gilbert, Isaac, James, Capt. John, Jonathan, Joseph, Lawrence, Moses, Moses Jr., Samuel, Stephen, Capt. Thomas and William Combs (sometimes Combs or Coombs) of New Jersey.

John Henry, Robert, Richard, Thomas, Michael, Anthony, Joseph, Joshua, Samuel, George and Charles are some of the masculine Christian names frequently recurrent in the annals of the family.

A few of the bearers of the name who have attained distinction in America in more recent times are the following:

Frank L. Coombs (b. 1853) of California, Lawyer; Gilbert Reynolds Coombs (b. 1863) of Pennsylvania, Musician; George Holden Coombs (b. 1864) of Kentucky-Missouri, clergyman; Zelotes Wood Coombs (b. 1865) of Mass., Professor of English; Morgan LaFayette Combs (b. 1892) of Virginia, Educator; George Hamilton Combs, Jr. (b. 1899) Missouri-New York, Lawyer and Congressman.

Colonel Eliza Combs Knuckles was born at the mouth of Carrs Fork in Perry County. She is the only remaining child of Clinton Combs and Louanna Baker Combs, and is a direct descendant of John Combs of London, England.

Late in her teens, she met and married George Matt Knuckles who lived at Beverly, Bell County, Kentucky. To this union there was born twelve children. Two of this family have passed on to their Maker. Her husband died some four years ago.

She is a member of the Old Carr Regular Baptist Church. She was baptized by the late Ira Combs of Jeff, Kentucky.

Raising and educating so large a family was very difficult, but by sacrificing most of the luxuries of life she and her late husband accomplished their aim in life for their children.

Eight of their family have degrees ranging from A.B.'s to Ph.D.'s, and are making their contributions to their fellow-men.

Mrs. Knuckles refuses to abandon her home at Beverly, Kentucky because she says she wants a place where her children can call home. A reunion of the entire family is usually held around Christmas time at which time the family feasts and frolics. And Mrs. Knuckles, despite her age, feasts and frolics with her children.

She tells many stories about her early life but the one she loves to tell most is about her courtship with Knuckles (she never was heard calling him George). "Ida (Ida Francis, my sister) and I were returning home from church on Carr Fork. We were riding Pap's old gray horse when we met two handsome fellows who were total strangers to us. They spoke very mannerly and rode on. Next day on their return from up Carrs Fork they stopped at our house. He asked me for my picture which I readily gave him, and the courtship was on."

"Later I got a letter from Knuckles and he came to see me. I learned later that he had told his brother Johnny that he would marry that golden haired girl, and within a short time we were married and on our way to Beverly where we have made our home and raised our family."

Mrs. Knuckles was made a Kentucky Colonel on the staff of Governor Ruby Lafoon. Eliza Combs Knuckles

A SONG OF BEAUTY FOR COMBS REUNION

By Amanda Slusher

To the Combs Family, I'll sing
A melody of beauty all day long
To man, child holy divine
Of your loveliness is my song.
Come, we are longing to see
The Combs Family, many brave and true,
Of thy loyalty, words I'll pipe
To the fruitful many and few.
To know thy fragrant flower
That richly blossomed on the way
By the roadside or valley deep
In darkness or sun, by day.
Combs Family, here and there
In Perry and many more
In town, country, land or sea
I'll sing thy faithfulness, in verse
O'lore.

To your dear family, happy and free
An old acquaintance dearly, must be
To renew deed, thought and face
With a smiling word, a smile to see.

Let's Hire A Professional

A little-known provision of the Appalachian Recovery Act has become particularly relevant to places like Hazard in light of the recent Fantus report outlining Eastern Kentucky's development potential.

Title III, Section 302 authorizes the Secretary of Commerce to make cash grants to non-profit development groups for the purpose of stimulating local communities to improve themselves.

The provision appears to be drafted liberally enough to give a community like Hazard a cash grant with which to hire, say, a trained person to lead this community in its quest for outside industry.

Hazard leaders, in the City government, local businesses, the Chamber of Commerce and the Perry County Development Association would do well to get together immediately to explore the possibilities created by this provision of the Appalachian Act.

It may be that this community, like others in Kentucky, notably Middlesboro, could get to work in forming an Industrial Foundation, financed by federal funds, that could have a well-paid Executive Secretary whose sole duty would be to persuade industrialists to consider this community as a site for plant expansion.

We have an abundance of talented people here now who could make up an outstanding advisory body in the Foundation. But because of their own jobs and businesses, the time and energy these people have to devote to community development is restricted to such activities as periodic meetings.

If an organization made up of these local citizens had a sharp, well-paid individual to represent it, and to do the real legwork, it seems that a good deal of progress could be made rapidly toward encouraging some sound industry to come here.

The Appalachian Act says the federal government would pay 75 per cent of the bill. The remainder must be put up locally, in cash or in kind.

It sounds like a good opportunity for Hazard, one that should be investigated as soon as possible.

Colonialism

Many Kentuckians, particularly Eastern Kentuckians, were no doubt cheered last week when the Fantus research film, hired by the state, reported after a survey that this mountain region would have industrial potential if only the "depressed area" image could be erased.

If Eastern Kentucky's "good side" was emphasized more than the bad, according to the report, then outside industry would become interested in "colonizing" the region, with the resulting influx of people with managerial skills, capable of "sound business thinking."

Of course Fantus is right when it says there is a side to Eastern Kentucky that is better than the rather bleak one that has received public attention since 1962.

Most of the county seat towns in the hills are rather comfortable middle-class communities, with neat lawns and suburban homes, like other towns of comparable size across the land.

The federal road-building program promises to enhance the area's ties with the mainstream of the nation's auto traffic.

Mountains not yet touched by strip mining are still beautiful.

UK community colleges are springing up here and there, and private colleges are upgrading their facilities.

Certainly all is not the picture of doom in Eastern Kentucky, as much of the nation has come to believe.

But as encouraging as the Fantus report is along these lines, and as eager as most Eastern Kentuckians are to accept the report as a refreshing new approach to "progress," it is unfortunate that the researchers chose to emphasize "colonization" by outside industry as what the region needs more than anything else.

Outside industry is most certainly needed. But does Fantus intend for the word "colonization" to mean what it is generally regarded as meaning? If so, then obviously the Fantus people have never been colonized.

Eastern Kentuckians have. The coal and timber industries provided that rich experience for them. Men with management skills, capable of "sound business thinking" have already been here, and at a time when the region's opportunities were far greater than they are now, back when the wealth of natural resources in these hills was yet untouched.

And now, after they have come, and gone, we are left with a situation that requires the hiring of a high-powered private research firm to figure out.

Dr. M.B. Payne

The difficult thing in trying to say something meaningful about the passing away of a man like Dr. M. B. Payne is that you suspect he would good-naturedly scoff at you for writing an emotional eulogy to him.

That was the kind of man he seemed to most of the people who knew him, and was one of the reasons the people loved him as they did: he was so absorbed in all the work that needed to be done he didn't have a lot of patience with things like eulogies and tributes.

Because of this intense devotion to getting work done—all kinds of work, from curing sick people to tending to the City's business—because of this, the Payne family's request that donations to a memorial fund take the place of flowers seems precisely the kind of response Dr. Payne himself would have preferred.

But there is no completely satisfactory way to respond to the loss of such a man, because no matter how hard we try, it's impossible to thank him enough for all the things he did for us while he lived.

With endless energy he traveled the streets and hollows and valleys to care for his patients, and for their sake he maintained long, exhaustive hours in his office. On top of that, with skill and imagination, and a good deal of courage too, he poured his dwindling strength into his town's affairs, helping to guide Hazard's destiny as one of its Commissioners, as a City Father in almost the literal sense of the term.

There's no way to say thanks to that kind of man. However hard we try, our effort will seem pitiful and small beside the great and selfless things he did for us for more than three decades.

Had the Payne family requested that flowers be sent, no church would have been big enough to hold them all. Now, in lieu of flowers, it seems appropriate to suggest that all those who knew Dr. Payne, and knew of him, make their final gestures of respect, affection, admiration and appreciation by donating what they can to the memorial fund, so that some small part of the work he began can be carried forward.

OUR READERS WRITE

Questions Urban Renewal Appraisals

To The Editor:

May I discuss some of the facts concerning the meeting of the Perry County Board of Education and members of the Hazard Urban Renewal Board last week? News media made it appear that a firm agreement was reached by the two boards and that the sale of the property was practically consummated. The facts are that the Perry County School Board signified the price they would consider for this property. Their action is subject to approval by the State Board of Education, and does not constitute a firm offer to sell until such approval is received. Likewise the Hazard Urban Renewal Board, has no authority to agree to this price but likewise it must be approved by the Atlanta office. Representatives of both boards expressed doubt that either agency would approve the action.

It would seem that there is a wide divergence in the opinions of the two organizations as to the value of this property. Two appraisals were made of this property by the Urban Renewal Board. The first was for $53,450.00, the second $48,100.00. The Perry County School Board in their action last Thursday night put a value of $166,300.00 on this property. This value based on valuation given by H. A. Spalding, Engineer who was everseer when the building was built. This is a difference of approximately $113,000.00 in the two viewpoints.

I would also like to point out that the Hazard Urban Renewal Board has no authority to negotiate a price for any property in this area since part two of this project has not been approved and no funds made available for the acquisition of property in the area. I would also like to ask how the Urban Renewal Board reconciles their agreement, according to news media, to consider this proposal, when their Chairman made the statement on several occasions, in open meetings, that the Board had no authority to negotiate with any property owner at a price above the highest appraisal on their property.

I would also like to pose this question for consideration. If the appraisals on this property is so far out of line as these divergent figures indicate, isn't it plausible to question appraisals made on other property in the area?

Teacher Praised For Action

To the editor:

Will you please publish the following letter I received recently from J. M. Dodson, Executive Secretary of the Kentucky Education Association? Thank you.

Leroy Martin

"Dear Mr. Martin:

I and other members of the Kentucky Education Association staff have read newspaper accounts of the Appalachian Group To Save The Land And The People. We want to let you know we are pleased that two members of the teaching profession—two members of the Kentucky Education Association and the National Education Association—took the lead in organizing the group.

We feel that such outside-the-classroom efforts in behalf of community service are in the finest tradition of the profession.

Sincerely yours,
J. M. Dodson

Agree Or Not

I Say What I Think

By A. G. VAN CUBBER

The Frankfort State Journal FRANKFORT, Ky. — Legislators will consider on three propositions in the special session called August 22 by Gov. Edward T. Breathitt.

The only one of these three expected to draw much discussion or debate is that dealing with property tax rates the Court of Appeals ruling on 100 per cent assessment of all property, but the other two are highly important.

These latter two are expected to slide through with ease—ratification of the Federal Constitution amendment dealing with presidential succession, and an enabling act to permit call for a limited constitutional convention for Kentucky.

Kentucky's constitution requires that two successive legislatures must pass a bill calling a constitutional convention, whether limited or unlimited. The limited convention measure this time will give the 1966 General Assembly two ways to go in calling a constitutional convention to study work of the Constitution Revision Assembly and to give the voters a choice in method to be put on the ballot for their ratification. The people must vote on the call, whichever method is chosen.

The 1964 regular session gave first approval to the unlimited session. If the special session approves a limited call the 1966 session may make a choice between the two to submit to the people.

After a convention call is approved, the people will elect 100 delegates to the Constitutional Convention, one from each House district. When their work is completed, any revision to the constitution recommended by them would then have to be approved again by the voters. . . . so amending the document is a long drawn out process.

There has been considerable discussion individually by members of the Revision Assembly to a limited call, restricting powers of delegates to a Constitutional Convention to voting "yes" or "no" for approval of a proposed new constitution to be drafted by the Revision Assembly.

The Revision Assembly's work is expected to be completed before the 1966 session of the General Assembly. This work embodies almost two years of work, study, and discussion by the 30-odd members named to the Revision Assembly by Gov. Breathitt. The membership was composed of former governors, lawyers, judges, and a cross-section of people representing all phases of life and business.

Much of this work was done in committees, reports drafted and then presented to the Assembly as a whole.

There also is one school of thought that believes the Revision Assembly's vote could be subordinated to the people for their ratification, thus bypassing a constitutional convention. This could be enacted by a session of the General Assembly. Undoubtedly a test case that would go to the Court of Appeals would be filed if this method were tried. Then, it would be up to the Court to say whether this method could be used. The Court is the final authority.

However, the prevailing and most popular opinion is to call a constitutional convention limited or unlimited.

Argument for the limited is that the people would know before hand what the constitutional convention delegates could do . . . approve or disapprove their proposed constitution submitted by the Revision Assembly.

Argument against the method is that convention delegates would be stripped of authority in a limited convention. Those opposing this say such a move would surely be defeated by the people at the polls.

Personal Opinion

"Eastern Kentucky Education" by Capt. Sammy Burklow

I am presently spending the last few days of a rather unpleasant year's tour of duty in Korea and I happened to read an interesting article in the May 15, 1965 issue of the "Saturday Review". The article is authored by a Mr. Peter Schrag and is entitled "The Schools of Appalachia". Perhaps you have seen it since you were mentioned specifically by name in the article, but at any rate it is a very penetrating appraisal of the prevailing attitudes concerning the education of our young people in that area of the nation today. And I am afraid that much of what Mr. Schrag has written is appallingly true, even though I am sure that his manner of journalism has not endeared him to his readers in eastern Kentucky.

The status of education in eastern Kentucky has been a source of irritation to me, since I am deeply concerned about the air of pessimism which has engulfed that region over the past few years, and assuredly a great factor contributing to this evolving atmosphere of despair is the educational negligence of our young people.

I was reared and educated in eastern Kentucky through the secondary level, and as I look back through the "retrospectroscope", I can recall the various teachers which I had along the way. The few prominent ones in my memory are the dedicated ones who "lived" teaching during every available moment of instruction time and attempted to pass on the thirst for knowledge to those of us who were fortunate enough to have them for our teachers. And then there are those teachers who we all can recall, in our own individual life situations, who made it a daily objective to do anything and everything to fill up the time allotted for instruction with varied subject matter ranging from exaggerated confabulations of personal exploits, to assessments of national political situations about which they had no interest, and even less knowledge.

All this was done with one goal in mind, put in a days work and collect the pay.

It is unfortunate that many of these teachers, of the latter type, are held in high esteem by those in the community who look upon them as good friends and automatically assume that they must be good teachers through an erroneous process of deductive reasoning. Comparison is the true test of a teacher's ability. If a student has the misfortune to obtain his abortive education from an endless chain of mediocre instructors, then most likely his opinion will be stereotyped through ignorance of the existence of anything better, but when this student comes into contact with the dedicated teacher he will usually experience one of two emotional revelations: (1) dislike for the dedication, because he is now expected to conform and learn; or (2) admiration and respect for the dedication to teaching and latent hostility for those who have come before and have robbed him of a portion of an invaluable learning process.

I do not mean to be selectively appraising the attributes of teachers in particular, but merely calling attention to the fact that it is no secret to most people in the country today that we are behind, far behind the rest of the nation in the educational fields. Perhaps our inherent tendency towards social and intellectual isolationism is mostly to blame for our failure to keep pace with the present demands of modern society for more highly educated individuals in competitive positions. On the other hand, it might be that our deficiencies in the field of education are imposing a sense of social and intellectual isolationism and ultimately, the sense of pessimism, upon the majority of our people because we cannot in fact compete on an equal footing with those who have had better educational opportunities in other more prosperous parts of our nation.

It is scientifically accurate to state that the neuron, or brain cell, in eastern Kentucky is physiologically equal to that found in any other human brain in the nation. The big difference is not genetically determined, but environmentally determined. The degree to which the potential is developed is directly related to the interest of those ultimately responsible for its development. We cannot expect to produce scientists, teachers, musicians or productive citizens when our attitude is one of complacency as far as our schools are concerned. Neither do we solve the problem by denying that it exists. It would seem that there is much to be gained by rationally assessing objective opinions of educators who have taken the time to offer constructive criticisms of the present status of education in Appalachia, and of course Hazard.

Afterall, what do they gain by criticizing where none is due? As far as I know, there are no salaried critics who get compensation for running down our part of the country. In fact, most Americans could care less about what goes on in eastern Kentucky because they have regional problems of their own. Only those of us who have roots there will shed tears of sorrow for the place of our birth.

Here in Korea at my particular location we have a service club for the men, and in that club is a bulletin board which has a map of the United States on it. Each man is invited to put a pin marker on the map denoting his hometown. As one looks randomly at that map there is an area of noticeable density as far as the locations of their individual hometowns are concerned. If one traces the area of maximum density, one would obtain a crude map of Appalachia in outline.

Perhaps this alone tells part of the story. Patriotism plays a part to be sure, but in reality, many of these men come into the Army because of the limited opportunities for them in other sectors of society, and this certainly can be correlated to educational levels right across the board.

In closing I would say that Mr. Schrag's article evoked a response from me which I am sure is quite similar to others there in eastern Kentucky. At first there is a sense of indignation because of criticism of our part of the country, a perfectly normal response to be sure. But this is quickly suppressed by the realization that what he says is in fact perfectly true. To deny that it is may give some measure of recompense for an image destroyed, but it will not save or prevent the heartache and sorrow that comes when an individual is turned away from his chance for success in life because of a shoddy education which his well-meaning forebearers helped to endow him with.

There are no better people on the face of this earth than can be found in the mountains of eastern Kentucky, and there are no more deserving people of the opportunities that our country can offer. But the solution will not be found in progressively increasing the amount of federal money spent to rehabilitate the residue of inadequate education. The solution involves more than palliative therapy; it involves an objective attack on the problem from the ground up with a minimum of congratulatory back-slapping for the status quo.

If I could encourage just one young person to take advantage of his opportunities, such as they are, and hope that his elders have the foresight to help his followers start on an equal educational footing at some future date, then my comments will have been worthwhile. But civilizations have crumbled while precious time was wasted on flamboyant dissertations on social problems and projected solutions. Perhaps this is one.

Respectfully yours,

Work To Do, But No Workers

A few months ago you read, or heard, that oranges and grapefruits were rotting on the trees in Florida because there was not sufficient labor to gather them.

A few weeks later you also observed in the news media that strawberries, acre after acre of them, were going bad on the vines in California fields. Why? Because there was no labor available to gather them.

Now listen to the latest. Georgia peaches are rotting because workers won't work to pick them.

This news came along almost to the day it was announced in Washington that the House passed and sent to the Senate a $1.9 billion appropriation to finance the war on poverty for another year. This is twice the amount made available for the first year of operation. Under this poverty war we're going to provide jobs opportunities.

Judging from the experiences of the citrus, strawberry and peach growers the opportunities are already available just for the asking. A peach grower in Georgia says a fellow can make as high as $12 a day and those who want to work a little harder can make as high as $20. Peach growers are worried. They say this is the worst of all years from a labor standpoint. Some say they're getting out of the business.

Listen to what one governor, R. M. Smith, of Jackson, Ga., says:

"They (workers) stand on the streets, they won't work. They won't even come out and give it a try. Government checks!"

Of course the shortage of farm labor is due to Secretary of Labor Wirtz' cutting off of foreign workers, mostly Mexican. He wants American labor used. But if Americans, hypnotized by government checks and handouts, won't work, then who but foreign labor is going to gather the food crops?

One revision that seems called for is the war on poverty would be for the government to cut off rockin'-chair checks to people in the immediate vicinity of the Georgia peach groves who refuse to work in them. A well-publicized move of this sort might give second thoughts to federal-financed loafers all over the country. Certainly there are unemployed people who are trying their best to find work, but apparently none of this sort live in the Georgia peach country right now.

Welcome, Combs Family

Welcoming the vast Combs family to Hazard for its annual reunion is one of our more pleasant tasks every year, because the arrival of all the Combs for a weekend of reunion is a pleasant event to have occur in this community.

A cross-section of America is represented by the Combs clan. They come from every state. All the professions, trades and occupations are represented among their numbers: doctors, lawyers, politicians, ex-governors, teachers, miners, farmers, technicians, laborers.

There are great men named Combs, and if you looked hard enough you might even find a "bad un" in the clan. The whole variety is there, a great mixture of people as exciting as the variety of America itself.

Having scattered across the land, over the years, no doubt some Combs' from California might seem a little different from the Combs' who remained this side of the Mississippi. But regardless of the differences that have grown among them, the clan is forever united by one thing: their common heritage of origin.

That heritage is being celebrated here in Hazard this weekend. The mountains have, like a magnet, drawn the clan back to the hills from which it sprang. The reunion is a Homecoming for folks named Combs, and for the Perry County community as well. For even though many of us can't find a trace of Combs blood in our ancestry, try as we might, there are still the ties of old friendships, made long ago.

In many ways, these are as permanent and valid relationships as those of blood, and a main reason why this whole community is, as always, inevitably involved in the Combs family reunion

Drivers' Licensing and Instructing Program In Kentucky Outlined

By Arlis Fields

If you are a frequent visitor to the Perry County Courthouse you probably have noticed the large crowds in the Perry Circuit Clerk's Office on any Thursday or Friday.

The reason for this large gathering is that Thursday and Friday are the days when Kentucky driver's license and instructional permits are issued.

Kentucky presents a well trained staff of license examiners in its State Police Division such as Delmer Lafferty and Bobby Bentley, familiar figures seen around the Perry Circuit Clerk's Office in the courthouse on Thursday and Friday.

Lafferty is the regular examiner for the Hazard area but due to heavy business on the two days allotted Perry County Bentley is here almost every week.

Long lines begin forming shortly after 8 a.m. on each licensing day to either take the written test for a drivers instruction permit or to take the road test for a license. Each applicant is processed by the clerks in the Circuit Clerk's Office.

From there he goes to the trooper or troopers in charge and told just exactly what rules to follow in obtaining a license or permit.

Before any one can take the written test or the road test he must present a birth certificate to the examiner.

Perhaps the most important thing included in the procedure of obtaining a driver's license is a safely equipped automobile.

Kentucky law states that all automobiles driven on Kentucky roads must have brakes, lights, horn, windshield wipers and muffler working at all times.

These features must be working properly on any auto before the driver will be given the go ahead to start the test.

The local road test begins at the municipal parking lot at the East end of town. From there the test course extends up East Main Street to the intersection of East Main and Maple.

On Maple Street the driver will be asked to park parallel to the curb, to park as if he were on a hill, and to come to a complete stop and properly back up.

After leaving Maple Street the test runs down East Main to Liberty Street. Once on Liberty Street the testee is asked to properly turn his auto around.

After this has been completed the auto and driver get back on East Main and return to the starting point.

If the driver has successfully passed his test he will be sent to the Circuit Clerk's Office to pick up a temporary copy of his driver's license. The permanent copy is mailed to the holder from Frankfort.

"It makes us feel real good to know that we have licensed a careful driver," Trooper Lafferty said.

For the month of July, Lafferty and Bentley gave either written or road tests to 882 applicants.

Through the early part of July, 295 tests had been given in Perry County alone. Of this amount 107 were road tests, with 63 passing.

In the overall total, 112 people who passed the tests were under age 25.

Kentucky driver's license have to be renewed in the birth month of the holder every two years.

The law in Kentucky will not permit circuit clerks to issue a temporary operator's license to: a person who is under 16 years of age; anyone whose license has been taken away (revoked or suspended) and has not been reinstated; an insane person; a drunkard or one who has a drug habit or anybody found to have a dangerous weakness of body or mind. You do not need a license in Kentucky to drive if:

1. You are driving a vehicle in the service of the United States, Army, Navy, or Marine Corps.
2. You are driving any road machinery, farm tractor, or other farm implement which has to go on the road only once in a while.
3. You are at least 16 years of age and have with you a valid driver's license from your home state and your home state affords Kentucky residents the same privilege.

The Kentucky licensing examination program consists of four parts: Road Sign Test, Eye Test, Road Rules Test and Driving Demonstration.

Your Kentucky driver's license may be taken away if you are convicted of (KRS 186.560).

1. Driving under the influence of alcohol or narcotics.
2. Manslaughter or Reckless Homicide.
3. Perjury or False Affidavit to Department of Public Safety.
4. Felony involving use of motor vehicles.
5. Reckless driving, 3 convictions in 12 months.
6. Leaving scene of an accident—failure to stop and render aid.

Each year more and more Kentuckians receive a driver's license, one of the most cherished of all licenses issued.

Tests on the local scene are given each Thursday and Friday from 8 a.m. until 9:30 a.m. for those who wish to take the written test. Road tests usually start at 10 a.m.

In the afternoon, written tests are given from 1 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. with Road tests starting between 1:30 and 2 p.m.

Kentucky State Police License Examiner Delmer Lafferty prepares to start another driver on the road test. This is after all required equipment on the auto has been checked and found to be in working order.

An important part of the road test is backing properly. The test on the local front requires that each applicant for an operator's license back up properly before a license will be issued. Here Charles Combs properly backs his car during the test on Maple Street.

Examiner Bobby Bentley congratulates another licensed driver after successfully taking the road test. This particular driver was Charles Combs, 16, of Grapevine. Combs' father, Charlie Combs waits at right in the picture to take his son to the courthouse to pickup his license.

This report compiled by Mrs. Earle Combs, Historian, Combs Family Association from information given by Floyd Clinton Combs, Pineville Attorney, and brother of above Mason Combs; his cousin, Mr. Denver Knuckles, Beverly, Ky.; Mrs. Doris Davidson, Baton Rouge, La.; Mrs. Clinton C. Combs, Portland, Ore. (who says her husband was named Clinton because it was a favorite name of his mother and so far as she knows has no family connection and other sources.

MASON COMBS

Lived in Virginia, later Surry County, N. C., where he died. (On a tax list Surry County, 1772, are shown Mason Combs, Sr., Mason Combs, Jr., and John Combs).

JOHN COMBS

Came to Perry County, Ky., in 1780 via Pound Gap, Va., born in King George County, Virginia around 1735. Died in Perry County, Ky., in 1819. Buried at mouth of White Oak Creek, near Happy, Ky. Father of 8 sons who were with father, called "The Nine".

MASON COMBS

Married Jenny Richardson in Wythe County, Va., Jan. 29, 1793. The exact wording was

"Mace Combs to Jane Richardson." Wythe County was formed from part of Montgomery County, Va., in 1789 and Mason, Henry Harrison and General Lige Combs—3 of the 8 brothers—were born in Montgomery County, so probably all of them were. (Henry Harrison Combs married his first wife Rachel Clements in Montgomery County, Va., on Sept. 21, 1788.

Mason Combs and wife Jenny settled at the mouth of Carr's Fork on present site of Combs High School. He died in 1822. Mace's Creek in Perry County was named for him. He was born about 1757 and said to be the oldest of the 8 sons of John and his wife Nancy (?). Mason

Combs sired the following: Clinton Combs married Elizabeth (Betsy) Combs. He was born 1802, died 1900.

Washington Combs; Bonaparte Combs, married Susan Ison, lived near Booneville, Ky.; Tarleton (Talt) Combs married Betsy Ison, 12-25-1826, Perry Co., Ky.; Preston Combs married Nancy Stacy; Martin; Nancy Combs; Willie Combs; Tabitha Combs; two other children.

CLINTON COMBS

Clinton Combs, son of Mason and Jenny Richardson Combs, married Elizabeth Combs who was a daughter of John (Rockhouse) Combs who lived in Letcher County. Children of Clinton and Elizabeth Combs were: John (Hoppy) Combs born 1831, married Polina Combs; Martha born 1830; Nelson born 1838, killed in Civil War, never married; Elihu born 1839; Lidi- anne, born 1841; Emeline, born 1843; Susan born 1845, married a Combs; Adinorum (Edwin?) born 1847; Cinda, married a Grigsby; Betts (Elizabeth) married a Wooten.

The second wife of Clinton Combs was Louanne Baker, daughter of Isaac Baker, and they had the following children: a child who died at birth; Sampson, born 1870 and whose first wife was a Cornett and second wife was Rachel Cornett, Dave born 1872; Cooley, born 1874; Eliza, born 1876, married George Matt Knuckles and is the Combs; Ido, born 1878; Jane born 1880; Nason, born 1884;

James Pete, born 1870-1, married Anna Godsey, William who died of T. B. in Texas, married Emily Combs, daughter of Preacher Ira Combs, and Dish- n. n.

NOTE: The above birth dates are from census and family records which do not always agree. Early census records are not always dependable.

Floyd Clinton Combs says "My grandfather, Clinton Combs was born in 1802, not 1809 as someone has figured by census record. My father, Mason, was born in 1834 and you can see by his father's age that he was 82 years old when my father was born." Dr. Mason Combs married first Lucille Broughton, daughter of Henry and Ellen Slusher Broughton. Henry Broughton was sheriff and County Court Clerk of Bell County for 38 years. He died in 1933 and my grandmother in 1939. My mother, Lucille, died in 1915 when I was two years old.

The mother of my brother Mason (our first Combs Family Association President) was Margaret Osborne, daughter of Judy Osburne of Cynthiana, Ky. They were married in 1917. He was the youngest doctor to graduate from Louisville Medical school and began the practice of medicine in Bell County at age 21.

"George Bertram Combs, oldest son of Dr. Mason and Lucille Broughton Combs married Clara Lawson of Pineville, Ky.; Children: George Mason 22; Richard, 20; Sharon, 18; Charles Clinton, 15; and Asher Alvis, 4."

Floyd Clinton Combs (myself) married Louise Lynch of Barbourville; no children. I am the second son of Dr. Mason and Lucille Combs.

TAKE YOUR FAMILY TO CHURCH THIS SUNDAY

A PRAYER

Let me do my work each day;
And if the darkened hours of despair overcome me,
May I not forget the strength that comforted me
In the desolation of other times.
May I still remember the bright hours that found me
Walking over the silent hills of my childhood,
Or dreaming on the margin of the quiet river,
When a light glowed within me,
And I promised my early God to have courage
Amid the tempests of the changing years.
Spare me from bitterness
And from the sharp passions of unguarded moments,
May I not forget that poverty and riches are of the spirit.
Though the world know me not,
May my thoughts and actions be such
As shall keep me friendly with myself,
Lift my eyes from the earth,
And let me not forget the uses of the stars.
Forbid that I should judge others,
Lest I condemn myself.
Let me not follow the clamor of the world,
But walk calmly in my path.
Give me a few friends who will love me for what I am;
And keep ever burning before my vagrant steps
The kindly light of hope.
And though age and infirmity overtake me,
And I come not within sight of the castle of my dreams,
Teach me still to be thankful for life,
And for time's olden memories that are good and sweet;
And may the evening's twilight find me gentle still.

Wallace B. Francis

Third Vice-President

Wallace B. Francis, third vice-president of the Combs Family Association and presently employed by the Hazard City Schools, was born at Jeff, Kentucky, when his family was in the process of moving to Carr Creek from Oklahoma.

His mother, the late Ida Combs Francis, was the youngest daughter of Clinton and Louana Baker Combs of Jeff.

Shortly after his 17th birthday, he left the Cumberland hills, as a green country boy, and went out to see the "Great White Ways" of America's largest cities. Before World War II, Wallace had been in 20 states and Canada and Mexico.

During World War II he was in the Hg. and Hg. Squad, Ninth Air Force. He has spent about one-third of his life traveling and visiting some of the world's largest cities. Among the great cities he has visited are Cairo, London and Paris. He wrote a short book titled "My Journey Through The Holy Land" and some short articles titled "In The Land of The Pharaohs."

He is a graduate of Carr Creek High School and Morehead State College. Wallace is also president of the Hazard Education Association.

He is married to the former Lou Lykins of Hazard.

Douglas C. Combs

Douglas C. Combs, son of the late Dr. Dishmon Combs and Callie Williams Combs, is a native and life time resident of Hazard. Mr. Combs attended the Hazard City Schools and after three years of service with the U. S. Navy, he continued his education at Louisville Prosthetic.

In 1947, he returned to Hazard where he began his business, the D. C. Combs Dental Laboratory, which he owns and operates at the present time.

In the meantime, Mr. Combs has given eight years to the City of Hazard. Two years he served on the board as City Commissioner and six years as Mayor. Presently he is an elected member of the Kentucky Railroad Commission.

Mr. and Mrs. Combs and their two children, Barbara and Dougie, reside at 334 Maple Street in Hazard.

Leslie Combs Is Famous Horseman

Leslie Combs II, one of the most famous horsemen in the United States, is another of the famous Combses in the Commonwealth.

After imported Tomy Lee won the Kentucky Derby, more than a few horsemen were wondering how they could breed to the winner's sire, Tudor Minstrel. Combs had brought Tudor Minstrel, last October, 1958, for $300,000, syndicated him, and brought him from England. On his trip to England, Leslie stopped over in New York to appear on Dave Garroway's TV show.

Leslie is the son of Daniel Combs. He was born in 1901 and was one of two non-scholarship football players allowed to accompany the famous Centre football team of Bo McMillin et al. on road trips.

Perhaps the only man who attended Centre during the golden period of football who admits he did not play first string, he was a substitute end who sat on the bench when the Praying Colonels stunned Harvard 6-0 in 1931.

Following graduation, Combs spent a year in Guatemala with the South American Plantation Co., contracted malaria, came back to Kentucky, worked a year in Ashland with the American Rolling Mills Co. In 1924, he married Dorothy Enslow, daughter of the founder of Columbia Gas Electric Co. He moved to Huntington, W. Va., and opened the Combs-Ritter Insurance Company.

In 1937, he sold out his interest in the insurance company for a substantial profit and returned to Lexington.

He bought 127 acres from F. A. Rowland on the Ironworks Pike and set up business boarding mares. He named the place Spendthrift, after the 3-year-old champion of 1879 which Dan Swigert had sold to James R. Keene. This was only the beginning.

State Police Name Perry County Man As Ninth Fugitive

Kentucky State Police have named Conrad Combs, convicted in Perry County some four years ago of shooting and wounding with intent to kill, as their ninth-most wanted fugitive.

Combs replaces William Thomas Foster on the list. Foster, wanted for storehouse breaking, was captured last month by police at Lexington, where his offense took place. He was the fourth most wanted fugitive apprehended since the program started.

Combs was given a 10-year sentence by Perry Circuit Court in September, 1961. He appealed his case and was on bond in May, 1962, when the Court of Appeals affirmed the sentence. Police said Combs jumped his bond and has since been at large.

Combs, 38 years old, five feet, 11 inches tall and weighs 165 pounds. He has dark brown hair, which he usually wears long, and blue eyes. He wears glasses.

The State Police identification card says he has a record of dealing in stolen property, rebuilding junk cars and operating "low-class taverns." It added he has friends in the Lexington-Richmond area.

Vernon Cooper, Bervin Collins, coach Aster Sizemore, Keith Reynolds and Larry Combs. Standing are: Gordon Benning, Will Ray Frazier, Freddie Hogg and O. J. Rowe. Other teams staying in college facilities and working out were: Pikeville, Louisa, Boyd County and Woodford County. The entire squads and coaching staffs of the five schools conducted their pre-season drills on the Morehead campus in what is believed to be the first such cooperative effort in this region of the United States.

Child Welfare Agency Superintendent Plans To Resign September 15th

The resignation of Rev. Ervin H. Plumer, superintendent of the Presbyterian Child Welfare Agency, Buckhorn, was announced to the staff today. His successor will be F. Richard Schneider, of Neillsville, Wisconsin. The changes in executive personnel will be made September 15th.

Rev. Plumer will go to Springfield, Illinois, where he will be Child Care Consultant for Department of Children and Family Services of the State of Illinois.

Mr. Schneider is currently director of Social Services of Winnetago Children's Home, Neillsville, Wisconsin, a position he has held for five years. Previously he served as program and executive director of the Housing Authority of Yamhill county, McMinnville, Oregon, a project for migrant workers.

Attorney General Asked For Definite Ruling On Huge Truck Weights

The State Attorney General will have to make a definite ruling to question on whether proper weight limits for large trucks have been setup before a final hearing on the truck weight case can be held in Perry County Court.

The initial hearing of 6 truck owners accused of violating the state's 16,000 weight limit on secondary roads was originally set for this past Friday morning before Perry County Judge Babe C. Noplis but was put off until an answer to the question can be received from Frankfort.

Noplis lashed out again Friday at the so-called "deal" made between the state and coal truckers during 1962.

The "deal" that the judge was speaking of is the one in which Foster Ockerman, then State Motor Transportation Commissioner, and J. D. "Smitty" Smith, former State Representative, allegedly told the truckers that if they would buy a certain size tag they would not have to buy the state gross weight tags.

The truck weight trouble started some 5 weeks ago when the Perry Fiscal Court, acting on a petition from 46 residents in the Lost Creek area, asked the state to send in officers and scales to check trucks, particularly on secondary roads in the county.

The load limit in Kentucky on secondary roads is 16,000 pounds, however, most of the large tandem coal trucks weigh over that amount when not loaded.

In regards to the "deal" one trucker who asked to be in court on the weight breaking charge said he came to the Perry County Court House in 1962 to buy a license for his large truck. According to the trucker he asked proper officials what size tags they would recommend for his rig. The officials reportedly told him (the trucker) that 44,000 pound tags would be sufficient.

It was learned at the hearing Friday that several other counties in Eastern Kentucky had cases such as this in the court but were waiting to see what action was going to be taken in Perry County.

Noplis said upon learning of this, "I'm not going to paralyze Perry County while every county in Eastern Kentucky is breaking the law."

Judge Noplis made his first firing at the state officials after Ben Combs, State Motor Transportation Chief, said that 108 overweight citations had been issued in Perry County.

"There were no citations issued in Perry County," Noplis said of the statement from Combs.

"We handled the cases just like Ockerman and Smith asked us to," the judge continued. "They (Ockerman and Smith) asked me to go along with the special deal," he said.

It will be around two weeks before a final answer to impending question can be secured. Noplis said he would reset the hearing after that time.

The fine for hauling overweight is 9 cents for each pound over the limit.

Sheriff's Department Explains Incident With Unruly Prisoner

The Perry County Sheriff's Department has given an explanation to an incident that took place in Perry County Jail this past Saturday night.

Perry County Deputies Ed Farler and Gordon Fugate arrested two men at Combs on a public drunkenness charge and brought them to the jail. The men were: Bill Stanifer and Oberin Stanifer, both giving their address as Avawam.

After arriving at the jail and during the time that the pair were being booked Oberin Stanifer took a punch at Fugate that landed on the jaw. A scuffle, involving turnkeys at the jail and Stanifer, started and the unruly prisoner was restrained and taken to a cell by Deputy Jailer Bill Kelly, Jr.

Stanifer then started to take a swing at Kelly but met stiff opposition. (A right hook to the jaw) from Kelly that ended the whole affair.

All this happened after the two prisoners had been turned over to Perry County Jailer Bill Kelly.

Kentucky law states that a prisoner becomes the responsibility of the jailer the minute he is booked on the charge and is no longer the responsibility of the arresting officer.

Huge Crowd For Combs Reunion

Old John Combs started it all, back in 1619. That's when he arrived at Jamestown, Virginia from London aboard the good ship Marigold, a descendant said yesterday.

"Most of us trace our ancestry back to him," said Mason Combs, secretary of the Combs Family Association.

"Us" is the approximately 2,000 Combses from an estimated 30 states that gathered in Hazard yesterday for the third annual Combs Family Reunion.

Mason said the idea for the large gathering was born when a group, later to become the association's board of directors, gathered to make plans little more than three years ago.

"We expected around 150 people at first," he said. Last year we had 1,100, the first year a total of 1,500 attended and by the time everyone is registered we hope to have more than 2,000.

The reunion was so big that the Hazard Memorial Gym had to be rented to take care of everybody.

The Hazard Shrine Club set up concession stands, just in case somebody who forgot a picnic lunch became hungry.

Most of those present, ones Mason called "the immediate family" brought their own and spread it on tables in the gym.

Why was Hazard chosen for the big event?

"Well most of the Combses at one time or another were in the Hazard area," Mason said. Family Association, according to Perry County Sheriff Charlie Combs, Commonwealth Attorney Tolbert Combs as well as former mayor Douglas Combs land to Florida.

and about 111 other Combses still live in Hazard.

Among prominent members of the Combs family present for the big show were: Former Kentucky Governor Bert T. Combs; Earl Combs, former outfielder for the New York Yankees, now of Richmond; Lexington thoroughbred breeder Leslie Combs III; and Ben T. Combs, state commissioner of motor transportation.

Also present at the reunion yesterday was Mrs. Bernice T. Hiser, writer of the prize winning song in the Hazard Herald Ballad Contest for the Combs Family Reunion.

The winning song, titled "Ballad for The Combs Reunion," was the best of 15 entered in the contest.

For her winning song Mrs. Hiser received a year's subscription to the Herald, a box of personalized stationery, and five dollars in cash.

Second place winner in the song writing contest was James Farmer Asher who won a year's free subscription and a box of personalized stationery.

Taking third place in the contest was Mrs. Ruth Stone, the winner of a year's free subscription.

The expense of staging the reunion is borne mostly by the board of directors of the Combs Family Association, according to Perry County Sheriff Charlie Combs, Commonwealth Attorney Tolbert Combs as well as former mayor Douglas Combs land to Florida.

New Strip Mine Regulations Proposed

Proposed regulations to strengthen the governing of strip-mining operations in both Eastern and Western Kentucky were announced this week by the Kentucky Natural Resources Department.

Natural Resources Commissioner J. O. Matlick told a press conference that his office was asked to draft the regulations by Governor Edward T. Breaunitt after he toured stripped areas in both sections of the state in July.

Matlick said a public hearing will be held August 25 in the auditorium of the Department of Health Building at Frankfort to consider the adoption of the regulations.

The regulations were prepared by Deputy Resources Commissioner Robert K. Montgomery and Elmore C. Grim, director, division of strip mining and reclamation.

"These regulations will carry out the intent of the 1964 act," Montgomery said.

Matlick said the primary purpose of the proposed regulations is to limit stripping on steep slopes in Eastern Kentucky and to require more grading in all strip mining operations in Western Kentucky.

The new rules may have the greatest effect on Eastern Kentucky strip-mine operators he said.

Matlick pointed out that some Eastern Kentucky operators may have to cease operations because the slopes on which they mine are too steep.

He added that the new regulations were not intended to force anyone out of business.

These regulations would apply mainly to Eastern Kentucky.

Under the contour method of mining where the average slope is greater than 20 per cent, the highwall produced may not be greater than 48 feet. There is no limit under existing law.

(The highwall is the perpendicular face of a mountain above the coal seam exposed for stripping.)

The overburden shall be graded so that the water will drain toward the highwall with a slope not to exceed 5 per cent. The present regulation is 20 per cent.

No fill bench shall be produced on slopes steeper than 58 per cent.

(The bench is an area in the overburden between the actual mining area and the original surface of the ground on which the mining machinery can sit and operate.)

Where acid mine drainage should be sealed, or the acid chemically treated.

These regulations would apply mainly to Western Ky.

The overburden on lands that do not produce a bench, age is encountered, the drainage that do not produce a bench, and on which the average slope, before mining, is 20 per cent or less, must be graded may be traversed by conventional farm equipment (tractor, roller, etc.). The old law governed only land with a slope of less than 12 per cent.

No slopes within the graded area shall be greater than 25 per cent. The final grading shall be done contourly, leaving ridges to retard excessive water runoff.

Grading on a slope with a grade less than 20 per cent must be completed in not less than 60 days, except under unusual circumstances.

No grading shall be done when the overburden is wet. No back-blading (used for final smoothing) is permitted.

The standards governing the replanting of mine areas will also be strengthened under the proposed regulations.

Matlick pointed out, however, that the new regulations on replanting will largely define practices that are currently required by administrative determination.

The proposed regulation for vegetative cover does contain a new recommendation that trees and shrubs be planted on undisturbed soil so as to screen stripped areas from public view. This would include visibility from public roads and toll turnpikes.
